Thought on the construction and policy of prisons 1785.

- 560 - It put you the prison in a state of affairs. In the middle of the letter. Main sur 1 line elev. + to 2 you the number of men, 2 ^{etage} halls, on the chimney of fire. ~~the~~
- 561 - 2 others were on 8 "apartment" de bill et d'un autre d'Herbert" formant un des ~~et~~ bâtiments.
most of them were built.
562. - men put under the police with great severity for security. In this case the men are; the unique "infirmary" into whose rooms the eye of vigilance can penetrate with greater ease."
- The master, the apartment, some "may prevent important relations between prisoners, without remembering the machine.
- The common life is regular; a regular plot by day and night; 8 hours of rest or 10 minutes of punishment; 2 usual alarms.

564 The parole ^{BnF MSS} rule, is in this with complete or better man sur. "Perhaps the regulations observed in garrisons and camps, wherein good order and a state of constant vigilance are so very essential, may suggest to civil power a form of society, steady in its openness, easy in its execution, and yet effective to all the purposes of security."

— Mais de là, nous que l'on appelle "mores rule and order" et "under the control of the magistrates and gentlemen of the district." Pas d'interférence de l'armée.

565

— 92 et 93. "qui est-ce qui contrôle les choses?"
"The conduct of the house of industry in Suffolk and Norfolk, in one of which I was a director for the space of 3 years seems to me one of the most and practicable mode of government and control."

A committee room, spacious, commodious, and pleasantly situated, is set apart, for the weekly meetings of the directors and guardians of the house.
They consist of the local clergy, and the gentry of the country. They visit in rotation, each taking a month. "Il en résulte 2 réunions avec le directeur de la maison, qui présentent le travail de la maison et le compte. on inspecte le magasin; on demande à l'apothicaire de recueillir des médicaments."

566

on named him to receive the money.
