The present state of the world is such that it is impossible to see the future with any degree of certainty. The only way to see the future is to see the present, and the only way to see the present is to see the past. The past is the only thing that is certain, and the only thing that is true. The future is the only thing that is uncertain, and the only thing that is false. The present is the only thing that is real, and the only thing that is alive. The past is the only thing that is dead, and the only thing that is gone. The future is the only thing that is possible, and the only thing that is hoped for. The present is the only thing that is what is, and the only thing that is what we are. The past is the only thing that is what was, and the only thing that is what we were. The future is the only thing that is what may be, and the only thing that is what we may be. The present is the only thing that is what is now, and the only thing that is what we are now. The past is the only thing that is what was then, and the only thing that is what we were then. The future is the only thing that is what may be then, and the only thing that is what we may be then. The present is the only thing that is what is here, and the only thing that is what we are here. The past is the only thing that is what was there, and the only thing that is what we were there. The future is the only thing that is what may be there, and the only thing that is what we may be there. The present is the only thing that is what is this, and the only thing that is what we are this. The past is the only thing that is what was that, and the only thing that is what we were that. The future is the only thing that is what may be that, and the only thing that is what we may be that. The present is the only thing that is what is now, and the only thing that is what we are now.
