Rowland who was a traitor, "to be hanged cut down before he is dead, his neck to be cut off, his bowels taken out, and then to be quartered, which quarters are to be put up where His Majesty shall appoint." A supposition is made "T. R. was conveyed on a hurdle from Newgate to Execution Dock. The executioner was in the hurdle with him, having in his hand the instrument with which he was to quarter him. Soon after he was hung up, the executioner cut him down, and immediately severed the head from his body, ripped up his stomach and took out his heart, etc, exposing them for some time to the crowd, which was so very great that many were hurt." cited in the C.M.

- Henry Angelo (Reminiscences 1828-30) : un ouvrier avait exhibé de "making a day of it". "It was common throughout the whole metropolis for master coach-makers, framemakers, tacton, shoe makers, and other who had engaged to complete orders within a given time to bear in mind to observe to their customers, 'that will be a hanging day, and my men will not be at work'."
