Huckle Hill. August 20. 1853

Dear Maria's friend,

I am afraid you have quite forgotten me, and I write a line in hopes that when you have time

I may hear from you.

I had intended going to Germany this summer, but when the time came, my heart failed at the thoughts of retreating the coast, and returning to the place, where I had passed such happy times with her, the "Sage" you, whenever I hear, that light is deep, and even present to my mind. I must have seen (some day I hope) a beautiful library in Chancery which the Duke of Devonshire kindly gave me, and which I have recently had given him, being given up at home. It is precisely like the best I have had of myself.

We are sorry that you do not visit England this summer. - I?
Abraham Smith has told me is beyond his abilities.

I am W. Croker. I will not offer to send to myself when he has a letter to send;

then hopes to be him good.

Our Palmer
will not be left
W. Gladstone to the death of he came to see

Suffered at last, two days before he died he dictated a letter to me, he seemed to have then hoped Country was bright to him good.

The Parliament still lasts & will not be up till next week, Mr. Gladstone is absent, owing to the death of his sister in law, he came to see me a few days since & seemed out of humour wth the Mr. Hammond & the way of business is conducted. The commencement of our business so quickly saw the subject of the Principality

Or rather, why we should have persecuted all along, is what seemed so little to concern us, is puzzling — could it have the variations to Quincy!

but whatever is the cause, our foreign policy is not successful, & some day is not likely to be as long as D. Schumann's reign.

Edw. W. Palmer & J. de Saur's dinner with us about a fortnight since in London, the latter is very much improved, indeed both Mother's & her long time gent friends here, from their kindness & appearance.

We have asked to meet them at dinner yesterday at Lord Sandown's, but having unfortunately occupied my hand I was unable to go; but my husband told me that John & Macaulay dined there. He would think of passing time on these shoulders in England.

India is of course, the chief subject of her occupation here, the accounts

lettres are not good;
My nephew Sir David Baird accompanied Sir Colin Campbell as M.D.C. - when we last heard from him at Cairo - They were making a very rapid journey & taking little rest - The heat was extreme.
May excuse this long letter, & believe me dear Rousseau Guzot. Ever truly yours,
Wm Rob.
