July 3. 1862.

My dear Madame Guizot,

If any thing could recompense me for losing the pleasure of seeing you, it would be the letter you have kindly written me.

I should have been so terribly flattered by being mentioned in your book - but you seemed hesitant about doing so, and I thought it therefore better not to accept it - a thousand thanks for your kindness - the thought of what would have been so gratifying to her.

I would have looked with many thanks - I have sent it - as others have done here with much pleasure.
