Sir

I have been lately indebted to you for making me acquainted with Mr Tichnor of Boston, for which I ought to return you my best thanks. But perhaps it is in my power to make a better return, by introducing to the person of your acquaintance a gentleman well known to you by reputation, Mr Philomax, an intimate friend of my own, & who, in an edition of Gibbon which is now in the course of publication, has much availed himself of your assistance.

I must on this occasion express my sense of the great honour & kindness I have experienced at your hands in the recommendation of my name to the Institute of France as one of its Foreign Associates. I cannot doubt but that I am chiefly indebted for this to yourself; but I feel also the deepest testimony of gratitude towards the other members of other valuable persons, whom I may now presume to call my brethren.

As soon as I have completed the work which now occupies me, I shall take the time in presenting myself personally to the Academy of Moral & Political Science, &

I trust that I shall then have an opportunity which has as yet been wanting, of becoming acquainted in person with yourself.

I have the honor to remain
Sir

With the highest respect Your most devoted & faithful servant
