My dear Monsieur Guizot

I will not, since I feel myself under the hospitable roof where we met last year, offer our young friend to visit Val Picher without a few Lines from myself. interested to his case - I have heard with the greatest interest of your happy return, as I must call it, to your own hearth.
None is always home, lays our powder; 5 when it brings with it not only our private domestic affections, but the restoration of our nation lead to our eyes & hearts, as with you, the memory of the part is forced back upon us with redoubled pleasure. Your return has been hailed by all that is respectable, as I learn from a letter <sup>of yours</sup> to Mr Cochrane, which Murray was permitted to read to me, as well as by those of Mr the Pensioner to Charlotte Colman & to my daughter. I look with much interest to the course you may adopt, perhaps the present state of France will induce you to await a more settled season. She would seem to be Mostly intriguing;

but some are too gracious at this in Hungary - had from Murray himself with the anti-Liberal has mediation may as it is, the hostile has neither been we have hoped to Boston have been in London, & would as far as the hear which completed de-fence is enjoyed bright of view is from the level of the look, as you see, to distinction

 Rubine
 at power
 the
 in her reputation,
 Mr. Cobden,
 to read
 of the her to much
 her depth,
 France
 more to be clearly indicating; but the causes of the last storm are too manifest. I am grieved at this villainous intervention in Hungary - had England abstained from throwing herself, by her diplomacy, into the anti-Austrian scale, her well her mediation might have been accepted! as it is, the hostile intervention of Prussia has neither been successful nor honorable.

We have passed three or four lectures at Buxton since we parted from you in London, & went for a very few days as far as the new Thomas Bridge, which which completed will be a great loss before is engineering, as at present height of iron is 8 or 10 feet from the level of the water. I am here, as you see, with our kind friends the Bouleaux, who, one of the talkers of your family. Julia is with me; we depart this morning or in a few days shall set off for Cornwall, almost the only part of England which I have never seen, even for a mile. In September I think that we shall be found at Clifton, where I often spend the autumnal months.

I tell Guillaume that I was much pleased with some Latin verses, written last year & addressed to his sister, which were less known. The Victorians hold ourselves good judges in such matters. They are uncommonly narrow in thought & vigorous in expression.

I tell him also that among the books I intend to see are a volume of these stories, two of Aphrodite Hermassi, & an Aristotle, which are not mine - to whom Should I send them? I miss also one volume of my own Alfred's Greece -

My two daughters are in perfect health, & I am recovered from a slight ailment which kept me at Buxton. Dr Holland is going to Constantinople, the only capital that he has not visited.
 The poor Colman is in Holland; I hope that Lady C. will recover tolerably from this bad & sudden

BCA; they would exceedingly attached to each other - your daughters know how I come from Miss C.

Julia desires me to give her her love to her friends, including Mr & Mrs Cheboud - & I had not long, with how much interest I ever regard the welfare of your family.

When a few minutes of business occurs, perhaps you will let me hear from yourself - meantime believe me always

Your faithful & attached friend

Henry Hallam
