My dear friend

I have too long delayed to reply to one of the most kind & friendly, among the many kind & friendly letters that have reached in my affliction. It is indeed all that you say of it - I cannot dwell on the subject - You & your good daughters keep him that is gone, & know that it is no ordinary loss - great as such a life must be to every father. This is the second time that such a calamity has fallen on me - the second, I mean, in circumstances wonderfully similar. He had, as I heard, been lost by Providence in order to fill the place of his brother - so every day I expected on the reappearance in their character, talents, & in many slight traits of my dear & dear mother's when that I knew that he had been left alone. My is a comfort

he has behaved & thank God!
suspicion, & the
the uncertainty of his credit he now that at hope we had the society of the
who has behaved
dear daughter

- great
 in my
 and my has
 and, I mean,
 July
 & beyond,
 - in many brother -
 - on the location, 14 traits

of manner's disposition. All is now gone - But do not believe that I am wholly back into this heavy despondence of 'Heaven. My dear daughter is a central source of comfort she has behaved most admirably, & thank God! her habitual resignation, & long experience of the uncertainty of worldly affections has enabled her to bear up far more than at <sup>first</sup> ~~the~~ I dared to hope we had a great blessing in the society of Miss Richardson, who has behaved to me like a second daughter.

Do not suppose that I am incapable of attending to business, or uninterested in other things.
The present crisis in our church affairs has been of use to me & I frequently turn my thoughts towards it - though for this affair we are far from agreement, they do not try the heart like our private sorrows.

Lord J. Russell has done great service by a well written - more than he can appear.

I saw yesterday our dear friend Mr. Hallam He told me he had been after the Globe.

Give my very kind regards to those of whom you recollect to say Let me hear of you again

Your truly & devoted friend
H. Hallam
