My dear friend

I was happy to hear a very good account of you & all your family from the Coltmans, who were extremely desirous of the kind attention you all paid them during their stay at Paris. We have since heard of their arrival at Naples, where they seem to be quite happy.
I hope the two will do good to their health - You would think them a few copies of the book remain what two friends of my dear son have drawn up - I hope it will be of great interest - nothing in fact was more up to the feelings of those who loved him best & were dearest to him but I preferred that his character should be drawn by his contemporaries; who in some respects could more minutely report on them even myself - His great moral excellencies are perhaps not enough dwelt upon; but these can never be fully displayed in words; & those who know him have them always in their hearts.

So have been the father of two such persons as Arthur & Henry; so when in their chamber & cabinet, by the the mysterious language of their deaths, has been with slipping of my life also the name of I need say no more have learned the last

It is pleasant to strength has been her calm & cheerful through the shock of her health, or, any to her cheerfulness - that I may leave her abounding in health & heart, affections as with respect to the child without objects to love affectionately as the father for me - God, I trust her for all her virtues se verra en le sachant pas, y jurer toute mesure à cet égard au moins à la session prochaine : la passion à ce sujet n'a certains combattants nous permettra-t-elle de faire cette marche prudente ? je crains que cela ne soit pas possible ; mais je continuerai à faire ce que depuis de moi pour cette cause possible relative.

Bonne nuit, mes amis, que je vous embrasse l'assurance de mon sincère et respectueux saluement.

Ch. Feubere

There will be one of our policies that it worth saying - we have made a blundering affair about the "papal aggression"; which in my opinion has not worth the clamour it has raised.
There is indeed pertinaciously aggression, but I doubt whether they can easily be checked by law; & at least I think the proposed interference with the her episcopal titles of no use, & hardly justifiable or generally granted.
Perhaps it might have been right to provide that they should deny like themselves, Roman Catholic Cuthy, of A. by way of distinction.
Sir J. Russell has shone in his days as a minister - he is exposed to the scorn of the people; the people has a power here, which it hardly exercises with you. Yet we have seen that no one else can be minister at present - Our boasted Reform Bill of 1832 has borne these fruits - I shall always be glad to hear of you - give our best regards to your daughters & when you go a Ratched friend
R. M. Russell
