My dear Friend

Though I am not sure, I am wholly confident what Sir J. Gorleau has written to you as to the improvement of my health, I am certainly able to walk better than when I wrote to you last, & one day I go as far as the attention ^{from} to my own projected house, while as you this year, the know is full an English occupation mile. Still I find my volume of left hand very weak a very adept & my handwriting is hard I will hope = by legible so that I summer no am glad to employ my will even daughter's assistance. once more to I regret very much that of seeing you you have found it not lost but a = sorry to give up you translation own proposed visit to Leyland this year, though your English occupation in the last volume of your History is a very adequate reason.

 I will hope that next summer no impediment will arise, & that I may once more have the pleasure of seeing you. I have not looked at the English translation of your History

=tory of Cromwell. I cannot tell you what is the of the merits of Mr. Scoble, I do not possess the book which you mention. viz
"Carriington's Life of Crom-
-well" & "the perfect Poli-tician". though I have some idea that I recen-
-ber the latter title.

I have nowish to enter upon public affairs.

seen to be in their country the growth of what appears to me rather unreasonable -able expectations of success. As the Emperor Nicholas will not abandon Boldavia without force I fear there may be some difficulty about con-
-felling him, & anything further appears very questionable. Still I trust we may rely on

The cooperation of us the summer
-toria, but as yet our mind & the only success has been at affective Silestria. I am therefore to you this being anxious to see peace & success concluded on reasonable of Alexander terms. My daughter & her have great turns are well. We find reading & the country next week. success. But his. Boileau is in Germany more true but returns next week.
I hope to visit him in

of us the summer Pray give our mine & my daughters been at affectionate remembrance therefore to your children including the peace & happiness who's memory
