My dear Sir

I have delayed for some days answering your letter of the 1st to allow you time for reaching the address you gave me. I am very much pleased to find that the King is satisfied with the justice that I have endeavoured to do him, inadequately as I have performed my historical duty towards him; for really really no man that I have ever seen or read of has come not merely so closely but so victoriously in point of parameters, and of an ordeal of unexamined that severity. His know-ledgy does me the honour of remembering my price rooms with perfect accuracy - He must have been familiar with them in the stirring times between 1809 & 1815, when my my numerous debtors were

My numerous correspondents need to fill the Gazette, but I hardly expected that his Majesty should have remem-bered them after 10 years of such obscurity as has covered me & such wonderful events & all-absorbing occupations as have crowded upon him. When you had an opportunity you will, I hope, offer him my respectful gratitude.
 I do not return you the first note you gave me, because because I have found it a most effective answer to the malevolent insinuations made against him as to his secret wealth. You can hardly believe how extensive & how injurious that delusion was - the passage in the former mean-ingly was very useful in dissipating that error with common readers, but I have had some opportunities of making use of

purpose - but if you wish to have it, I will return
all my wishes for an autograph.

I have been greatly interested & entertained by the report of M. Daubigny, which is an curious a docu-

most as the Revolution has produced - but what has pleased me most is the "private" of M. de Rollins hypothesis - "If the 15 May had succeeded, in what would it have differed from the 24 February?"

Had we not the same right on the 17th March as on the 24th Feb. "It is quite true! I am every hour more & more convinced
that

that his report

of the 24 Feb

 last & that the principles of the 24 Feb. cannot

 We must return to legitimacy - to something that popular feeling can neither give nor

I am anxious to hear what answers
