London
en passant

My dear Sir 18 Oct. 48.

I find the rail road
time will not allow me
to see you & I therefore write to say that I have seen Mr. Murray & that he is, as I expected, ready to contribute his assistance with the utmost readiness; & I will answer
on my own responsibility, for the liberality of all his

M. Guizot

his proceedings - but there are two or three points which require
preliminary explanation.
Do you mean to publish with your name?
Do you mean to print
on your own account, hold copy in your own hands
the right of publication.
If you do, Mr Murray
will have it done for you
on the most favourable
terms - and if you do not intend to do it at

at your own
undertake to
in the first
I have the
fit with you
I have is ho
dile, in this
you 2/3d.

Even with a small part
not because
a great deal
pay its own
anonymous
over clear

- but
 these require
 explanation.
 to pub-
 lish?
 print
 out, hold

 iation.
 may
 for you
 available.
 you do
 do it at

at your own risk - he will undertake the expense
 in the first instance & share the ultimate profit with you. The usual share is half - but he will, in this case, give you $\frac{2}{3}$!

Even with your home
 as man power that can not be expected to do
 a great deal more than pay its own expenses - but anonymous power that however clear would hardly do so

so - but ^{think I} see from your note that your object is a public one, & that the question is not at all
one of profit. - I would therefore suggest whether you would not see Mr Dunsmuir & explain to him your views confidentially or, if you please, I will see you on my return early next week & will continue my negotiations
when I have ascertained your exact wishes.

I shall stay till Tuesday

L. The continuation of Jerome is quite Magnificent he has mixed both the serious & the comic of the new situation - How he has mismanaged that wonderful scene of the storming the assembly - & he had Oscar to play the Pompier & then throwing it into a letter from the faisette! the inconceivableness of such a device spoils the reality of the scene. In short it is pitoyable - Est-ce la fin?

Morning at Lord Hard-
wicke's - Wimpole - Arlington & would much prefer meeting on Tuesday on my way thro'
town. In this or in all cases I shall be delighted if I can be of any use whatsoever to you.

Love very dear Sir
Very faithfully
Yours

Edw. Coke
