My dear Sir,

At last I have received M. de Roaillon's work; but I am sorry to find that in its present state, I cannot undertake to review it. It is, it seems, but a livraison of a
work of which much more remains. Now it does not suit the quarter ly to give an account of incomplete works. It sometimes happens that publications are of such immediate interest as to oblige the review to notice them - as, for example, the Cartier's correspondence, which involves three topics of present interest - the Irish Union

- the Irish Priests & the European Settlement of 1815 - These require im-

 view complained that by leaving out a part of the publication before us, we were unable to do justice to the subject.

In the case of Madame de Maintenon the interest is too remote to justify the reviewing it in batens rompus.

The English public would want to see the finished pictures, & I am sure that our editor, Rivin & indult

gent as he is to me would not consent to insert an article on a life of which the most interesting half is yet to come. May I therefore beg of your kind help to be so good as to communicate this to the Duke de Noailles, to whom I should write directly, but in a letter with which he honoured me some time since, he gave me his address; and as you had at first mentioned the

I shall be, D.V. too happy to give our English public some account of
it. Ever
