quel anniversaire!

Mon cher ami,

I send you (ci inclose) the historical question.
Think, you were so kind as to say that you would write to Paris to propound to some one who has access to the Archives des Affaires Etrangères where Barillon's & Bonrepos' original despatches are. It will be curious to see which
of

of two such contradictory statements is true - I am just that M. Masure's version will be found the correct one.

Aberdeen told me the other day that you were thinking of an early departure - I have no doubt that it is quite safe & I suppose will be becoming in your not to be an exile any longer - but you may be assured that the present state

of things cannot

of things cannot last - The Republy & the President must soon come into conflict - and all will turn, as all resolutions have done & must do on 'the army'.

I shall not let I am sure you pay you an early visit.

Yours most sincerely

Whistler

who remember it & of the still fewer who from the first hour saw nothing

Sir James Mackintosh in his "History of the English Revolution" & (after him) M. Macaulay, both state, on the authority of letters from Ba-illon & Bourgeois, the French ministers in London, during January & February 1686
that Lord Rochester was concerned in an intrigue to set up the king's (James 2^d) mistress (Athena Sedley, Countess

of Dorchester against the influence of the Ducun; but M. Mazure is his
"Histoire de la révolution de 1688." noticing this intrigue expressly says that "Dorchester
y fut complètement étranger" & Mazure refers to Burillon & Bon repos! letters as his authority. (t. II - p 148.)

This being exactly contrary to Mackintosh's statement, it is wished to know by an examination of the original letters which is right - Mackintosh or Mazure?
