30 Sept 45

You guessed right - I have been in London for a week & came back last night; but as I did not go for two or three days after I received your letter of the 15th from Broglie, I communicated, to save time, your propositions to Mr Murray in writing & he tells me that he has written to you to accept them just as you have made them. For my own part, you may command me to do any thing that may be agreeable or useful to you in this or any other affair & I beg of you to employ me freely When

Amener et autant que je pourrais être serviable.
I am always glad to hear from you even when you have nothing good to tell, because I am sure at least to hear truth. France is certainly not the Palais de la Verité.
I find your "Assemblée Nationale" calling you all "a noble nation"
"a nation of heart & courage" & such stuff, when it is notorious - & that paper, above all, tells us clearly & tells us truly, that the whole history of France since the 24th Feb 48 is contained in two words cowardice & falsehood - forgive me, Mon cher Louis, those those I am sure undeniable. In two adopted

lie imposed secondary - the repeated the more & more gentle & simple deceit & co.
I am sure that 12 ^{millions} of elect & now the
in this web of that I at least
I don't even way - but no
it, but by and in which the kneel down - so

you for the letter.
to know
you your to be, be least to certainly write
"national"
the nation's
"pages" & voluntary tells us that the since the
in two about for me, then

those harsh terms; but they are the undeniable truth. The whole man-tion adopted in a panic a republic imposed upon it by a dozen scoundrels - Who again & again repeated the acceptance, hating it more & more - the whole nation, gentle & simple, outraging honour & earth, with a few June which no man of your 12 ~~millions~~ millions of electors meant to keep; & now the country is ^{so} entangled in this web of falsehood & fraud, that I at least can see no way - I don't even say no honourable way - but no way at all out of it, but by another revolution in which the whole people must lineal down - say their confederates & men

Omnia maxima culpa & confes them selves to have been "vices" les pecheurs et paltous". Ah mon ami, Je voudrais bien que la France fesse dans une auberge - elle pourrait en sortir en payant la note - Elle est dans une gêne elle n'en sort tira - que par l'effraction, ou la flétrissure. That is the true state of your case, & I confess I do not yet see what Don Quixotte is to attempt to release you from the chaine.

But you see the ordinary affairs of life go on tolerably well under this feeble & impotent ^{administrative} ~~government~~ which leads one to doubt whether truth, honor or strength are necessary ingredients of constitutional government. Tant à vous ^{signé} ~~correct~~
