M. de Vil. 14 Feb. 50

I sincerely congratulate you and Mademoiselle Guizot on the auspicious event you are so kind as to announce to me. I should, à plus forte raison, congratulate M. de Vil if I had the honour of knowing him. But, perhaps, we may hope to do by & by - for if M. de Vil has not been highland, we trust that we stand so well in

on the goodgraces of the Lady that she may recommend us to his curiosity; & if he has been already here we hope he may not be unwilling to see us again & about us to let us see his lady. Mrs. Cooper & Lady Barron desire me to offer also their compliments & good wishes.

I shall be glad to receive the promised notes on dama. time. I should ~~be~~ satisfied

Satisfied with good points
in vain, &
less tedious tho' all this amour pe-
ture good
twice the lead & the infidel
would be

Mrs. Barron
said to me
she had seen others, & that Desmoulins

delighted with half a dozen good points - It would be in vain, & to my great reu= der's tedious, to follow him thro' all the detours of his amorous progress - two or three good hits to charac= terise the levity of the man & the infidelity of his look would be enough.

Madame de Staël once said to me that I believe she had said & written to others, & that I think Camille Desmoulins had said before her,

her, that l'étranger est la postérité contemporaine
- it is, <sup>in</sup> that quality that I presume to think that your present regime cannot last out its two years; & that this increasing perplexity this accumulating congeries of all kinds of folly & mischief cannot end without a terrible convulsion - an orderly solution is impossible! - With Lamartine or Lavaigne or Proudhon deux, you might have worked out your experiment; but that seems to me quite incompatible with les idées napoléoniennes.
Tout à vous
