position &c. - I hope their names are John & Cornelius. Madame de Witt was so good as to announce herself to me - but so bad as to do so only the day before she left us. I hope she received the letter which I wrote her in return, requesting her to postpone her journey for one day & I went up in person, to urge the same suit - but on my arrival found she had gone two hours before. I trust Mlle Pauline, if she should surrender in England, will treat us better.

I am sorry, & very sorry, to see that you are growing as gloomy, as to political prospects as I have been all along - I am sorry for that fact, but not sorry to find that wise men appreciate the danger.

But the mode that is proposed for getting out of it is so manifestly - so outrageously absurd, that it can only aggravate & precipitate it. Art. 27 evidently applies only to the loss of the suffrage by individuals - that future laws shall determine how the general & universal right may be forfeited by individual crime or personal incapacity - but it never could mean to open a door for the decimation, the decimation if I may coin a word, of the whole body. Such a con

an instruction is incalculably more outrageous than Charles's was of the 14th Art. of the Charter. He had at least a verbal colour; this would ^{have} none at all. Alarmed & disgusted as all right minded men must be at the present state of things they will never, I think, submit to an attempted remedy so violent & yet so insufficient. It ^{would} ~~would~~ do you little or no good. Suppose you had made the govt indifferent or timid vote at the late election, can any one doubt that the majority would have gone with the stronger stream & I should have had a greater majority. My barometer tells me that you are going to have bad weather - Just alone knows how bad it may be. I dine tomorrow with my neighbours to meet the lady you mention. I can not mention the lady you mention. I can

Pepys: I am glad to hear of your good health & hope
you will be well
soon.

P.S. - Pray ask some one who may be likely to know whether any credit is to be given to Perrin's denial of Chemin's charges. On some points his denial is peremptory.
 It is really important to history to try all this trash & endeavour to get at the truth.
 Picot you see is afraid of Lagrange. It softened my impression.
