I writing Recluse writes to me some time ago "Der König ist schon lang nicht in Aachen für die Krone". I see any one was so much better than the I never asked you of course what you thought of these things. The letter I had seen the handwriting, my impression was was, that he was a minister of a kingdom, perhaps I am wrong. I am sure and I have been how he is judge the I have had a very long very interesting letter from my dear friend "Ludwig" von de Sumburg. He has been in Germany. His impressions about the newly favorable the the the of the white abandonment of the old system, & say that Scherzhaftig take no less than to be the the of the Russian monarchy, you of, and to do it, honestly with him, and supposing always that he to be a constitutional one. He that he say about the German & Magyar people his complaints with all the thought when buying them. But I will get the full of the to go. You have had entirely in hand, had taken how the & how to give the man the best his value to go One day I had leave at & go in a few days to visit the Charles in Aachen. I have just from that of the others being for introduction. They remain in Paris till April, & the day they found it a perfect solitude. The mentioned having been some of the (Hemlock?) & the paper mentioned.

The former is a man about whom we are very different opinions. But I do not think you have very farable proof his character given in comparison of words of friendship & he was an popular in the Colonial Office. He of this great & acknowledged ability.
You will find it worth while to converse with him, & should say a good deal. His official experience must interest you, & his character is very original. I am much attached to him & to the two or three subler innocent creature, some English women attend at their times I think for some time that he we feel quite doubtful of them. We but find in not given to be to give will do anything for him as you have said you thought better view. He we have some relation in being. Stephen I do not think of understanding in certainly believed that he would do well I have the pleasure of being acquainted with them. I should receive I think they would be much pleased to hear of you.
