Many
Jan 3 67.

My dear Margaret.

Allow me to thank you for a copy of your work on ^{you} ~~you~~ Munk. Had I been aware that you were about to publish a new preface, I would have arranged for you to see a curious memorandum, which I think is in Ld. Norwood's handwriting, or copied from him, on the character of Munk.
I will look at it when I go there, which if I am, otherwise, may be in the course of 10 days.

I have been much occupied in writing on the subject of the Paris' Brief - and hope it is of use to French Methodists. and to be out of the Press about the 1st.

How does the affair strike you, looking at it from a distance? The political consequences of the immediate step are comparatively unimportant in themselves, but when regarded as a symptom of the future action of the Roman See, it may be the commencement of the work of the English Reformation de novo, when and in what to predicate the fate of the English Church, although none can doubt the issue of the struggle between Scripture & the authority of the Church is beyond.

I think I shall collect almost everything necessary to write a preface to the proposed legal & political overture - the least however can be certain content led up in their composition. Let me hear & hear if you can spare time for a few remarks. I am likely to have my friend in London who can take back Paris with him & copy of my book for your acceptance about the end of this month. Write to the members of your family. Copy your health, yourself & mine. Very much yours, Yours truly
