My dear friend I send you a thousand thanks for the two addresses of the Representative you, which reached me about a week ago - valuable in themselves, & of course, still more so as coming from you.

Two weeks I have read them before I wrote to you, but the enormous amount of business that has accumulated during my long absence have so engrossed me that I have not been able to read any thing but last papers.

In a few days our vacation begins. I have to write some lectures, to be delivered in October. I shall be very anxious to look forward with great pleasure to reading again those of your works which I have already read, & reading for the first time the others.

Nothing will delight me more than to be the recipient of them on an occasion of this kind.

I shall be very anxious
to read all your works.

unforgotten things in your letters in your papers & other things which I have in Paris.
I shall be very anxious
I shall be very anxious

I shall be very anxious
I shall be very anxious
I shall be very anxious
to read all your works.

the South had any influence there - but it will leave nothing; I must have had the matter not yet even I cannot consider that they mean to do more.
My suspicion is that what they ultimately do, whether will be too strong for the Jones, & too weak for the Radicals - that they will be defeated by a Tory & Radical alliance, & that they will a Tory front & a Radical & rear for 4 or 6 years - I think then the Whigs will come back, & will be larger, or at least more numerous, than they were before - & will be the only party from which we can expect our daughter - every woman
