Elm College

Oct: 21 - 443 -

My dear Sir,

I am afraid, that I take a great liberty in presenting to your Notice a young Friend, for whom I entertain a very high Regard, and who is now pursuing a short Term in ^{Paris} ~~France~~ merely with a view of improving himself by the literature & literary Society of France.

He was long a Scholar, and he obtained both at Elm and at Cambridge the highest Distinctions. He is of a singularly amiable & modest Character, & I am quite sure that his manners and appearance will command him almost at first sight.

He is well connected;
for he is cousin to Lord Stredbrooke, & he has also some claim on French society as being nearly related by marriage to Monsieur de Lamartine.

It would be a high Honour & Pleasure to him to receive so much Notice, as your important

Duties will allow space to a young

your interest

Duties will allow you to spare to a young stranger.

I had the pleasure 2 times at Etou a few days since our friends Mr & Mrs Austin. They left me to return to Paris. They were well at present, but, I fear, they must make up their minds to a long Expiration

I look back upon with a sincere Pleasure & Pride upon the short enjoyment I had of your Society as it is several years since.
My husband has left the same Impression on your mind, that all my Compatriots retain of contribute to strengthen the kindly feeling, which ought to exist between two free Nations -

Hope my young friend will justify his intuition on your time, & remain

By I am Sir with the greatest respect & profoundest regards
