AccueilRevenir à l'accueilCollectionDe la guerre de 1870 à la Commune de Paris: lettres à sa familleItem Lettre d'Eugène Lee-Hamilton à Matilda Paget - 24 Mai 1871

Lettre d'Eugène Lee-Hamilton à Matilda Paget -24 Mai 1871

Auteurs : Lee-Hamilton, Eugene

Information générales

LangueAnglais
CoteVernon Lee Archive, Miller Library, Colby College, ME
Nature du documentLettre manuscrite autographe
Collationpapier; 6 pages
SupportPapier
Etat général du documentBon
Localisation du documentVernon Lee Archive, Miller Library, Colby College, Waterville, Maine, USA

Les folios

En passant la souris sur une vignette, le titre de l'image apparaît.

6 Fichier(s)

Les mots clés

Commune de Paris

Dossier génétique

Ce document n'a pas de relation indiquée avec un autre document du projet. []

Citer cette page

Lee-Hamilton, Eugene, Lettre d'Eugène Lee-Hamilton à Matilda Paget - 24 Mai 1871, 1871-05-24. Holographical-Lee, Sophie Geoffroy, Université de La Réunion; projet EMAN (Thalim, ENS-CNRS-Sorbonne nouvelle). Consulté le 23/11/2025 sur la plate-forme EMAN : https://eman-archives.org/HoL/items/show/1939

Texte & Analyse

Analyse

MeWC

Amb. d'Ang.

17 Rue des Réservoirs

Versailles

May 24. 71

Wednesday, noon

My little darling,

I fear there will be very little of Paris remaining by tomorrow judging by the devastation of yesterday. The Louvre and the Tuileries are burning; the insurgents having set them on fire as I understand. The Madeleine is being battered to pieces, the Ministère des Finances & the Cour des Comtes [Comptes] (that fine building on the Quai Voltaire) in flames. The Embassy has been much injured, though Chiefly in the topmost stories where the servants sleep. My apartment is unhurt, only one ball having struck entered through my kitchen window. Nobody has been injured in the Embassy; Malet & the rest remained in the cellars yesterday. Lord Lyons is just going into Paris, --rather rash of him I think, as the there are still of course a good many Communists lurking in the houses who would be happy to fire a stray shot at passers by. Montmartre was carried yesterday at the point of the bayonet. The fighting was tremendous in the Champs Elysées, the Insurgents having a large battery erected at the Concorde end, xxx and the Versaillais another at the Arc de Triomphe. The Insurgents have set all the public buildings on fire. I also hear that they are blazing away upon the town indiscriminately from the two forts of Bicetre [Bicêtre] and Montrouge, which they still hold. In Paris however, they are being driven from steadily back into their last strongholds. I saw an Englishman last night who has charge of an ambulance in the Palais de l'Industrie. The shells kept dropping through the roof all night. -I received thy first dear letter last night -yesterday evening. It gave me such pleasure as did dear Baby's. I have seen M. de Lespérut, who, as a Legitimist is in all his glory and expe evidently expects a speedy restoration. I fear the Legitimists are rather in too great a hurry. M. Thiers ha for reasons best known to himself has made an alliance with the Republicans, and notwithstanding his great services in creating an army and conquering the Commune he has I understand lost much of the confidence of the assembly. Now that the Commune is on the point of giving up the ghost, Civil war appears likely to break out between the parties who have were first united again by the pressure of the Prussian invasion, and next by the outbreak of the Socialists.

Dear baby [Baby] will I fear be very angry with me for writing such a pamphlet as the above, but the events in Paris are today all engrossing. I like Versailles as a place very much 'owing to' in the nearness of the beautiful park, and a charming swimming bath close by. I take my breakfast in my own room, and should be very well satisfied with my abode little room chez Lord Lyons, which is clean and airy, were it not that lunch and dinner are tedious and that I am not as independent as I should be in a lodging of my own. I have however asked M. de Lesperut to go with me to the Trianons on Saturday and then to dine with me at the Hotel des Reservoirs. He is a cultivated and agreeable companion, and I owe him a return for a dinner at Bordeaux.

I shall try to get to Meudon this afternoon, and get a distant prospect of Paris. We have little work to do, but it may be only a momentary lull. Everything here is redolent of the old French monarchy; tout y respire le grand monarque. The Ministère des Affaires Etrangères where I and the other Ministères are established in the Palace. I found M. de l'Esperut in the room in which Louis XVI's guards were cut down by the Paris populace when it marched to Versailles. The weather continues lovely. Tomorrow I will write a long letter to darling Bags. Today I have not sufficient materials for one, and must ask her to take her share of this one. My toile cirée parcel of books and boots arrived uninjured, but I was obliged to buy a little leather house for it in the shape of a tiny valise at Florence. A thousand loves. Thy E.

Auteur(s) de la transcriptionGeoffroy, Sophie Auteur transcriptionGeoffroy, Sophie

Présentation

Date 1871-05-24 Genre Correspondence Mentions légales

- Document : Courtesy of Special Collections and Archives, Colby College Libraries, Waterville, Maine
- Fiche: Holographical-Lee, Sophie Geoffroy, Université de La Réunion; projet EMAN (Thalim, ENS-CNRS-Sorbonne nouvelle). Licence Creative Commons Attribution - Partage à l'Identique 3.0 (CC BY-SA 3.0 FR)

Editeur de la ficheHolographical-Lee, Sophie Geoffroy, Université de La Réunion ; projet EMAN (Thalim, ENS-CNRS-Sorbonne nouvelle) PublicationInédit

Informations éditoriales

DestinatairePaget, Matilda CouvertureVersailles, France Notice créée par Sophie Geoffroy Notice créée le 08/07/2021 Dernière modification le 10/10/2021

MeWC and day. 17 Rue des Recervoirs Versailles Wednesday, noon my little darling, I fear there will be very little of Paris remaining by tomostows judging by the devastation of testerday. The Louvre and the Juileries are burning; the insurgents having Set them on fire as I understand. The Madeleine is being battered to pieces, the ministre des Finances & the Courdes Contes ( that fine building on the quae Voltaire) in flames. The Embass has been much injured, house Chiefly in the topmost stories Where the Servants Sleep. My apartment is unhurt, only one ball having struck entered through my kitchen window. No body has been infured in the Embassy; Malet & the rest remained in the cellars yesterday Lord Lyons is just foring into Caris, - rather rach of him I think, as the there are still of Course a good many Communist lurking in the houses who would be happy to fire a strag Shot at passers by . Montmarty Was Carried yesterday at the point of the bayonet. The fighting was tremendous in the Champo Clysees, the Insurgents having a large battery creeked at the Concorde end, oft and the Versaillais another at the aso de triomphe. The Susurgen red have set all the public building tu on fire. I also hear that they are blazing away upon the town indiscriminately Day from the two forts of Bicetre and montrouge, which they Still hold. In Paris however cist they are being driven from Steadily back into their last y strongholds. I saw an inglishma the last night who has charge of an ambulance in the Valais Alting de l'Industrie. The shells kept upo dropping through the roof. my all night. I received they the first dear letter book might. It fave me such pleasure seen M. de Lesperut, who, as a Legitimist is in all his flory and expectionally expects a speedy restoration. I fear the Legitimists are rather in too freat a herry, M. Thiers has for reasons best known to himself has made an alliance with the Depublicans, and notwithstandy his freat services in creating an army and Confuering the Commune he has I understand lost much of the confidence of the assembly. now that the Commune is on the point of siving up the short, Civil war appears likely to break out between the parties who have were first united afair by the pressure of the Prusse invasion, and next by the outbreak of the Socialists. Lear baby will I fear be very augre With me for writing such a pamphlet as the above, but the Events in Paris are today all ingrossing. I like versailles as a place very much whe nearness of the beautiful park, and a charming swimming bath close by. I take my breakfast in my own room, and should be very well Eatisfied with my above little room cher Lord Lyons, which is Elean and airy , were it not that lunch and dinner are bedious and that I am not as independent as I should be in a Coffing of my own . I have however asked no de lesperut to go with me to the Trianons on saturday and then to dine with me at the Hotel des Reservoirs. He is a Cultivated und a grecable Companion, and I owe him a return for a dinner at Bordeaux. I shall by to get to mendon this afternoon, and get a distant prospect of Paris. We have little work to do, but it may be on a momentary bull. Everything here is redolent of the old freuel monarchy, tout y respire le frand monarque. The Ministère des Affaires Etvangères where I and the other Ministères are cetablished in the Palace. I found mode l'Esperat in the room in which Louis XVI & guards were out down by the Paris populare when it marched to Versailler. The weather continues lovely. Tomorrow I will write a long letter to darling Bags. Today I have not sufficient materials for one, and must ask her to take her share of the one. my toile cire parcel of books and boots arrived uninjured, but - swas obliged to buy a little leather house for it in the shape of a Fing valicat Horence. at thousand love of the ?.