Pilgrimage and birth of Marūtha. His education

[trad. éd. Marcus p. 57] [arm. éd. Lewond p. 19] And she returned to Antioch of Asorestan and dwelt in the martyr chapel of Saint Elazar and of Šmawon Samune and of her seven sons who were martyred; and she passed the whole night in prayer to God. With many entreaties and tears she asked the Lord of all, by the intercession of the saints, to fulfil the prayer which she had desired, as has been said before. And in a vision, she saw an angel of God who said to her, "Courage, o woman, for thy prayer hath been heard by God, and that which thou shalt ask of God will be thine by the intercession of the Saints in whom thou hast believed." And with a commingling of fear and joy she glorified God and offered praise, and she believed the words of the angel. And when she had returned to her home, she had a grandson by her son who was lord of the land ; and her heart was joyful, and she rendered thanks to Almighty God, and she had him baptized by the priest Marmara who loved God, and she named him with the name of his grandfather Marūtha, and she resolved that through this man God should make a visitation of this land, because there had been a manifestation of grace over the child. And after five years, she gave him for instruction to the priest Marmara who loved God, and he taught him to read and instructed him in the ways of the wisdom of life [arm. éd. Lewond p. 20] and in the faith of righteousness. And when he reached the age of the perfection of Christ, and appeared to be endowed with all graces and pleasing to God and man, he appointed him deacon, and after that a priest of the Church of God, which had been built by his grandmother Mariam; and he knew and understood that this life is vain, and [trad. éd. Marcus p. 58] he chose the way of holiness and righteousness, and he despised the life of this world; and he went on in going and made progress in the laborious labors of piety by testimonies to Christ. Because of this Mariam was filled with joy, because she saw the grandson of her hopes endowed with all austerity, and she rejoiced and praised God, and went away to her convent that she had built before, and there she became a devotee of great austerity; she accomplished all the days of her life to the glory of God. And afterwards came the end of Mariam, fulfilled in days and transported to Christ by all her virtue; and Marūtha adorned her tomb magnificently.
